SUPPLY CHAIN TRANSPARENCY:

Kuyichi discloses name, address, parent company, type of product and number of workers for most production units fully in line with the Transparency Pledge and provides factory names and addresses in a machine-readable format. → Kuyichi should provide a breakdown by gender of the wages paid by its suppliers.

see: transparencypledge.org

LIVING WAGE PAID:

This means: Kuyichi makes no claim and no public evidence was found that its suppliers are paying a living wage. → Kuyichi should respect the right of workers in its supply chain to a living wage and ensure full transparency in order to demonstrate the implementation of a real living wage at factory level.

Kuyichi has published a clear commitment to ensure a living wage is paid across its supplier network.

This is a good start! We encourage Kuyichi to put their commitment into action.

Kuyichi has no public plan describing how to improve wages for workers across its supplier network.

Kuyichi should commit to a published plan describing how a living wage will be achieved in a reasonable time-frame.

No evidence was found that Kuyichi takes steps to safeguard wages when they are in price negotiations with suppliers. This allows suppliers to put profit margins ahead of wage security for workers.

Kuyichi should isolate labour from other production costs, so its suppliers do not cut wages in order to negotiate lower prices.

Several benchmarks are available for companies to measure whether wages are sufficient to meet the basic needs of workers and their families.

No evidence was found of public information on gender pay gaps in its supply chain.

Of these, the company says it is using the following in its supply chain:
- Global Living Wage Coalition (Anker)

No data about wages currently paid to workers at its suppliers is disclosed.

Kuyichi does not publicly report on unionization of workers nor on existing collective bargaining agreements in its supplier factories.
